REF: Memo from Melbardis to Security Officer, dated 29 May 1957
Memo from Melbardis to Security Officer, dated 21 Jun 1957

On 23 July 1958, Subject received a letter postmarked Munich, which advised her that if she were interested in hearing of her husband, who returned to the Soviet Union last year, she should call Mun 48 08 74. Subject called and was given an address where she could call for further information. She went to the designated address and there received a gift package from the USSR containing, among other things, a box of chocolates, a pair of stockings (price: 35.50 rubles), and a bottle of perfume. It was also indicated that money might be made available to her in the near future. She was also told that if she desired to go to the USSR, such travel would be facilitated and her air passage paid.

Source is a good friend of Subject and promises to pass on to the Security Officer any further information concerning this case. He also states that, as a matter of course, he has passed this information on to an Inspector FUCHS of the Munich Police whose office is Ettstrasse, Room #370.

Source states that the Siedlung-Freimann, where Mrs. FRIDE lives, is the home of many Soviet patriots among the emigration.

Attached is a photostat copy of a telegram Subject received from her husband's parents in 1957.
